Last week, I worked with Ryan and Colin on the wire brush connector. We decided that there was an easier way to design the part, so we started from scratch. We are using copper ribbon that we had instead of a brush. I believe we are basically done with the part and it will be ready to be 3D printed on Saturday. My task for this week is to work with Colin to make sure that the part meets the requirements of our team and also the requirements of the electrical team.
