Last week, the team made our first successful test run of the science rig. It works to get the milestones finished, but is not ready for the Canadian rover competition if we decide to do that. We were hoping to do a test run of the science rig with the rest of the rover, but it looks as though the weather this weekend will not be permitting. Therefore, we will still be waiting to test the system this weekend. As a result, I will be working on brainstorming ways to improve the science system, especially if we are going to competition this summer.
