We had our meeting on Thursday. We were updated on all of the progress that we made in the last week. In the meeting, we also went over our design and were trying to solve some of the problems we were running into. One such problem is that there was not a hole at the top of the top collar of our design to allow us to stick a rod through it so that we could use the rails to guide the drilling apparatus. I was assigned the task to cut out a hole to the top collar in Solidworks. Other than that, I will be further familiarizing myself with the design and finishing off my Boyd Lab trainings.
